

Chapel architect reflects on his work

We have in our time all too few places of serenity, where reflection, meditation, and spiritual growth can be nurtured. A visit to the new chapel at Wartburg College offers us a chance to test how a physical structure could relate to an active spiritual inquiry in our lives.

If possible, all elements of this space should be subservient to the totality, so the architecture becomes a vehicle preparing us for a transcendent experience.

Our Christian tradition and experiences hold for each of us memories of churches of our youth and treasured historic and holy places that form our perceptions and our expectations in a mysterious way. The Wartburg Chapel may heighten our awareness. Its view from afar is a clue-giving silhouette. And the bells remind us when we are not looking. We rise into the campus via the chapel as a gateway. Words carved into the stone require us to pause and reflect. The chapel can be entered from many directions, through the low, dark preparatory spaces of the upper and lower narthexes, past the flowing water of the baptismal font, proceeding from the darkness to the light and height of the sanctuary. Here, it is possible that the containing walls and shell of the ceiling bending down afford an acoustically intimate, yet at the same time outwardly expanding space. If possible, all elements of this space should be subservient to the totality, so the architecture becomes a vehicle preparing us for a transcendent experience.

A word about the stained glass windows. I was not aware that the medium of glass itself has a certain power to sustain the imagination in an autonomous way. I cannot specifically say what these windows mean. To join them into the totality of the sanctuary, I suggest they be viewed while listening to the organ or a harpsichord playing Bach – the eye and the ear merged in parallel movement from beginning to end.

But of course, in the beginning was the Word. In the hallowed tradition of its faith, Wartburg has proclaimed and has struck deep roots. With its new chapel, Wartburg has declared where it stands.

Here is the church, Here is the steeple. Open the doors, And welcome the people.

Students, faculty, and staff join in a procession to the new Wartburg Chapel during Opening Convocation ceremonies Sept. 8.

About the cover

The cross is a prominent feature of the large east window in the new Wartburg Chapel. The same design is repeated in the altar cross, in the stained glass windows that line the sanctuary, and in windows at the entrance to the chapel tower.

TRANSCRIPT POLICY: Alumni who wish to obtain an official college transcript should contact the Registrar's Office, Wartburg College, 222 Ninth St. N.W, P.O. Box 1003, Waverly, lowa 50677-0903. The fee is $4 per transcript. Requests should include maiden and all married names used by an alumna/alumnus, as well as birth date and/or Social Security number. Kresge Grant boosts funding for South Campus

A $300,000 challenge grant from The Kresge Foundation of Troy, Mich., will assist in funding Wartburg's South Campus Project. The $3.2 project will add a classroom/technology center, connecting skyways, and a new entrance and parking to the south end of the campus.

According to President Robert L. Vogel, the Kresge grant is contingent upon the college raising $784,834 by October 1995 to complete the funding.

"Kresge grants are very competitive," Vogel said. "To receive a grant of this magnitude is a strong affirmation of the college."

Dr. Richard Torgerson, vice president for development, said a campaign for the South Campus Project is currently under way in Waterloo and Cedar Falls. The Waverly community endorsed the project through a successful campaign last spring.

Spring tour will be Lee's swan song

It may not be too late to sponsor one of Dr. Robert E. Lee's last tour appearances with the Wartburg College Concert Band.

According to tour manager Nancy Hertel '70, Dr. Lee will retire from the music department at the end of this academic year. His final tour with the band, set for April 14-23, will include stops in Illinois. Tennessee, Georgia, and Florida.

Hertel said dates are also open for the Wartburg Castle Singers tour, which is scheduled for Winter Term break, Feb. 17-26. The vocal jazz group will perform in western lowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, and southwest Minnesota.

Alumni interested in scheduling a performance of either group in their area should contact Hertel at 319-352-1810.

ANOTHER EXCAVATION—The familiar plaza at the south entrance of Luther Hall has disappeared to make way for a classroom/technology center, part of the South Campus Project. The new building will connect by a skyway to the Wartburg Chapel, at left, and by corridors to Luther Hall, at right. Cardinal Construction of Waterloo has the general contract.

Torgerson said the college will seek gifts from faculty and staff this fall and then expand the campaign to alumni and friends of the college. Other foundation and corporate proposals are pending.

The classroom/technology center will provide a new home for the social sciences and state-of-the-art technology for teaching and learning.

The new building will be connected by corridors to Luther Hall and by a skyway to the Wartburg Chapel. Another skyway will link the chapel to the Fine Arts Center. The South Campus Project also includes a parking lot, which is already completed, a satellite downlink, and new seating in Neumann Auditorium.

This is the fifth Kresge grant awarded to Wartburg. It equals the largest previous grant from the foundation, a $300,000 award in 1990 for the Fine Arts Center. The foundation supported projects for Engelbrecht Library in 1971, the Physical Education Center in 1977, and the Whitehouse Business Center in 1982.

State-of-the-art classrooms planned

Wartburg students will benefit from state-of-the-art technology in the classroom/technology center now under construction.

According to Dr. Richard Torgerson, vice president for development, three classrooms in the building will feature technology to enhance teaching and learning.

"Successful colleges in the 21st century must create a campus culture where technology plays a major role and where the learner is at the center of the educational process," he said.

One classroom will link Wartburg with the Iowa Communication Network fiber optic system, permitting student and faculty interaction with off-campus resources through voice, data, and video communication.

A second classroom will be structured as a collaborative teaching and learning laboratory with 24 multimedia, interactive work stations networked.

The third classroom will be a media-on-call facility, enabling faculty to integrate computing and media resources with their teaching from a multimedia podium.

AAL awards grants totaling $22,000

A total of $22,000 from Aid Association for Lutherans will help Wartburg finance a program for firstyear students, a retreat for faculty, and this year's Futures Project.

According to Dr. Richard Torgerson, vice president for development, Wartburg received three grants through AAL's Affirmations of Lutheran Higher Education Program. The program provides Lutheran institutions with financial support in the areas of management development and strategic planning, student recruitment, faculty effectiveness, financial development, congregational relationships, and community service.

The fraternal benefit society, based in Appleton, Wis., gave the college $6,000 toward the costs of an Alpha Seminar, which assists first-year students in their transition to college. A second $6,000 grant helped fund a retreat where faculty members worked on an academic vision statement required for the college's North Central Association reaccreditation.

A $10,000 grant was designated for this year's Futures Project, "Faces of the Family," which addressed family issues facing society and how these issues will affect the college as it plans for the future.

President's Round Table recognizes 15 new members

Fifteen new members whose lifetime gifts to Wartburg exceed $50,000 were inducted into the President's Round Table Oct. 7. Four other members were received into new orders in the Round Table Hall of Honor. The Hall of Honor recognizes donors in six orders:

Order of the Gate, $50,000 and more;

Order of the Plume, $100,000 and more;

Order of the Lance, $250,000 and more;

Order of the Chalice, $500,000 and more;

Order of the Knight, $1 million and more; and

The Round Table recognizes a number of deceased members whose planned gifts serve as a lasting tribute to their generosity.

The annual meeting of the group included a reception and dinner, a meeting, and a special program in the new chapel that featured the Wartburg Choir.

Inducted into the Order of the Gate were the late Martin W. '37 and the late Inez H. Ackermann '61; I. John '51 and Anna Marie Walther '51 DeYoung of Sugar Land, Texas; Albert C. '67 and Suzanne C. Duroe of Jesup, Iowa; the late Earl and the late Margaret W. Garland; the late Karl and the late Hulda Jessen.

Others were Steven B. and Jill Anderson Jobst of San Luis Obispo, Calif.; the late Katherine M. Kahle '15; the late Eugene J. and the late Charlotte L. Becker '20 Martin; Sylvia Schmidt '31 of Bisbee, N.D., and the late Waldemar A. Schmidt '31; Robert W. and Rose Marion Strong of Earlville, Ill.

Also, Dean M. Terry of Waverly; Thomas L. and Vivan D. Trunnell of Naples, Fla.; Lucille Waldorf of Mendota, Ill., and the late Charles Waldorf; and Waverly Publishing Company, Waverly.

Received into new orders were the Gardner and Florence Call Cowles Foundation, Inc., of Des Moines, Iowa, Order of the Plume; the late Myrle M. Burk, O. Jay and Patricia A. Tomson of Charles City, Iowa, and Waverly Community Foundation of Waverly, Order of the Lance.

Wartburg named on U.S. News, Peterson's lists

U.S. News & World Report magazine and Peterson's Guide to Competitive Colleges have again cited Wartburg among the top liberal arts colleges in the United States.

Wartburg made the U.S. News list of top national private colleges for the eighth consecutive year. The list includes 164 schools that award more than 40 percent of their degrees in the liberal arts. Rankings are based on student selectivity, faculty resources, financial resources, graduation rate, and alumni satisfaction.

Wartburg will also be included in the 14th edition of Peterson's Guide to Competitive Colleges, scheduled for publication next April. Selection is based on the academic quality of the student body.

New members added to faculty roster

Thirteen new faculty members, including two librarians, have been appointed to the Wartburg teaching staff for the 1994-95 academic year, according to Dr. James Pence, vice president for academic affairs and dean of the faculty.

Five of the appointments are replacing longtime faculty members who retired at the end of the 1993-94 year.

The new appointees are:

GILLIAN (JILL) GREMMELS '80

Librarian

Gremmels was the library director at Monmouth College in Illinois from 1991 to 1994. She previously spent seven years as a librarian at DePauw University in Indiana and two years at Wartburg Theological Seminary in Dubuque, Iowa. She was a research assistant at the University of Maryland, where she earned her M.L.S. degree, and in the history department at the University of Iowa. She is completing her doctorate in library and information science at Indiana University. Gremmels' mother, the late Marion Chapman Gremmels '52, taught English at Wartburg. Her father, Robert '52, was an administrator and journalism educator until his retirement last year. Her great-great-great-greatgrandfather was the Rev. Georg Grossmann, the first president of Wartburg from 1852 to 1868 and again from 1879 to 1893.

Fall Term enrollment shows slight increase

Wartburg's Fall Term enrollment of 1,405 students shows a slight increase over 1993.

According to the Registrar's Office, this year's total is up by five students. The figure includes 356 first-year students, 322 sophomores, 349 juniors, 311 seniors, and 67 special students.

Improved retention accounted for part of the increase. This year, 85.1 percent of the students eligible to return to school did so, compared to 84.6 percent last year.

American ethnic students number 95, the highest total since 1988. Wartburg students come from 30 states, with the most, 1,035, from Iowa. Minnesota contributes 92, Illinois 77, and Wisconsin 50. This college's 60 international students come from 20 countries.

Biology remains the most popular major with 214. Elementary education has climbed into second place with 192, putting it ahead of business administration, which has 169.

Of the students who list a religious preference, 658 are Lutheran, 205 are Roman Catholic, and 125 are Methodist. The rest come from several other denominations. Religions other than Christianity represented on campus include Buddhism, Islam, and Judaism.

Twenty-one students are studying off campus this term in such programs as Wartburg West, the Diers Program in Tanzania, the Capital Experience in Washington, D.C., Studio Arts Center International in Italy, the Bonn Exchange in Germany, and language programs in Spain, Mexico, and Ecuador.

Organist teaches from her bench

Dr. Karen Larson, Visiting Assistant Professor of Music and College Organist

Teaching for me is an opportunity to share with others my excitement about the worlds of music and worship. I have learned more about myself and life through singing a hymn, listening to a symphony, or playing an organ work than probably from anything else. I want others to have that same experience. I think the more people can explore the non-verbal dimension of life, the better off we all will be.

In teaching, I can do my part by helping students delve deeper into music, learning to hear more and to understand how music is constructed. Then, in their own performing and teaching, they can better express what they have discovered. Perhaps the most rewarding part of teaching is watching students' confidence grow throughout the term. They begin to realize their own potential and to recognize just how far they have progressed.

At Wartburg, my teaching is enhanced by the opportunity to share in worship with students and the whole college community. I teach from the organ bench as well as in the classroom. Being involved in worship leadership allows me to work together with others to provide meaningful expressions of praise and thanks.

This year, I am happy to expand this role by directing the Chapel Choir. As anyone who has sung in a choir or been present in a congregation of vibrant singers knows, music in worship can provide mountaintop experiences in which we see a tiny glimpse of heaven or understand a divine truth that words alone cannot explain. The very fact that worship is corporate and brings the whole community together in one united purpose is inspiring. But the special gifts, talents, and viewpoints that students bring to worship lend a unique and wonderful perspective that is especially rewarding for me. During my years as a church musician, I always felt that I was given back more than I gave. The same is true for teaching at Wartburg.

Larson is a graduate of St. Olaf College and earned her Master and Doctor of Music degrees from Indiana University. She was full-time organist and director of music at Zion Lutheran Church in Hopkins, Minn., before accepting a position at Wartburg in 1993.

Music makes a difference in our lives

Dr. Paul Torkelson, Associate Professor of Music

Many years ago, when I was first teaching high school, one of my colleagues asked me why we needed music in the public schools. I gave him the standard philosophical argument, but I never felt I was truly able to justify music in the curriculum. Since then, studies have indicated that certain types of music, especially classical, significantly raise the IQ of the listener. And music has many therapeutic properties, especially those manifested in music therapy.

However, other than the theoretical and historical studies in music, which are objective, music is a very subjective course of study. It is difficult to quantify what makes someone a fine musician or to evaluate a musician's progress. The responsibility of helping students realize their academic and emotional potential is a challenge for any of us in the music department.

Fifty percent of the Wartburg Choir and Castle Singers members are music majors. The rest come from all other disciplines on campus. The ensembles must be challenging and informative for those who will be teaching music, but also a rewarding learning experience for those who will pursue other careers. I teach at Wartburg because members of these ensembles have a desire to promote in-depth thinking or intense emotions in themselves and in their listeners rather than to merely entertain. This is something students carry with them and something they can share with others, not only in music, but in all areas of life. An ability and willingness to express ideas or emotions helps students prepare to be leaders who are sensitive to the needs of others.

A woman spoke to me after a recent Wartburg Choir concert, and it became even more obvious why I teach. We had just finished a very emotional rendition of Give Me Jesus by Larry Fleming. As I was leaving the hall, she grabbed my arm as I passed and said, "You know, I'm not afraid to die anymore." At that moment, I understood even more clearly the difference music can make in a person's life.

Torkelson is a 1976 Wartburg graduate and returned in 1984 after earning a master's degree from Kansas State University and a Ph.D. from the University of Colorado. He directs the Wartburg Choir, the Castle Singers, and the Meistersinger Choir. He has been invited to conduct the lowa All-State Choir's 50th anniversary concert in 1996.

From darkness into the light

From the darkness of Neumann Auditorium, worship on the Wartburg campus has moved into the light with the opening of the new Wartburg Chapel. The building was dedicated Reformation
Sunday, Oct. 30, as part of Homecoming Weekend.

"The first two things students wanted were intimacy and light," says the Rev. Larry Trachte '66, college pastor. The design by architect Ben Weese of Weese Langley Weese in Chicago, Ill., achieves both. Light streams into the building from clear windows on the north and south sides, and, according to President Robert Vogel, connects the church to the world. Through the chapel's focal point, a large east window positioned above the chancel, worshipers can look through a cross that forms the window panes and see into the world beyond. Lightcolored walls and woodwork and stone altar furnishings further enhance the feeling of light.

"Lt is the crown jewel of the campus," said Vogel at the opening of the chapel during Opening Convocation Sept. 8.

A $1 million gift from Elmer and the late Vera Wavering of Naples, Fla., launched the project, and a $200,000 commitment from Freda Zimmerman and her son Richard '51 of Mendota, Ill., funded the chapel tower. Cost of the entire project was $2.28 million.

"I have to score Wartburg very highly for the motivation," said architect Weese, noting that the design of the building is a credit to "the unique combination of a dedicated and focused client."

In early discussions with students, faculty, and staff, the issues of intimacy and light were paramount. After worshiping in Neumann Auditorium for more than 30 years, the college community was ready for a setting where the altar and the congregation were closer together and where 100 or 200 worshipers wouldn't feel lost in a vast space. Vogel added his desire that the chapel reflect the college's Iowa roots and its German Lutheran heritage.

As a result, Weese relied extensively on Anamosa limestone quarried at Stone City, Iowa, for the chapel's exterior. He and his associate, Jackie Clawson, incorporated many European elements into the exterior and interior design.

"There is extensive use of limestone, not just a limestone facade," noted Dr. Ronald Matthias '54, vice president for administration and finance. Limestone forms the entry to the chapel tower. The west side of the building includes a covered limestone arcade entryway. Inscriptions on the west wall, protected by the arcade roof, will chronicle significant events in the history of the Lutheran church, Wartburg College, and the Wartburg Castle. Above the arcade, a large stone is inscribed in German with the title of Martin Luther's Reformation hymn, Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott (A Mighty Fortress is Our God).

Further carrying out the stone symbolism is a Pool of Remembrance along the west arcade. The pool is lined and filled with stones from more than 300 congregations that over the years have provided the college with students, faculty, and staff, as well as prayers and financial support. According to the Rev. Phil Froiland, who retired during the summer as director of church relations, the stones have come from Iowa and around the world. He said the college is still accepting donations of stones, which should be no larger than six inches in diameter and can be taken to the Wartburg Visitors Center.

Imong the European design elements inside the chapel are the balcony, which extends around three sides of the sanctuary, and two smaller second balconies, which Weese likens to "arms that embrace us." The painted pews and relatively small altar reflect European tradition. Window and door trim is in the European style with no mitered corners.

Weese designed the building so that everything slopes toward the sanctuary. The floors have a slight grade downward from the tower to the chapel itself. The stairways are wider at the bottom, flowing toward worship. The ceilings in the narthex and entryway are purposely low to further enhance the feeling of transcendence when entering the sanctuary. Weese described the Iowa contractors who executed his design as "close to geniuses." Cardinal Construction of Waterloo, Iowa, was general contractor for the project.

Vogel, in his Opening Convocation address, said, "Construction of this place was a labor of love for the contractor and subcontractors," and he related the story of a foreman on the roofing crew who told his workers, "You can work on roofs all your life and never have the privilege of working on a roof like this."

The unusual roof consists of 40 tons of large concrete shingles, each weighing approximately 13 pounds and held in place with copper nails.

Weese also designed stained glass windows for the lower windows of the sanctuary. The designs on the south side utilize clear glass extensively, melding the colors of the outside world with the window patterns. The interior windows that line the north side are illuminated with artificial light and feature more colored glass.

Groundbreaking for the chapel was held in November 1992, and construction was essentially complete in April 1994. Many of the furnishings arrived over the summer and early fall. A major gift from the Rev. John '51 and Anna Marie Walther '51 DeYoung initiated funding for the chapel organ, which is on order from the Dobson Organ Co. Installation is scheduled for the spring of 1996. In the meantime, the college has moved a portable pipe organ from the Fine Arts Center to the chapel.

Vocalists, instrumentalists, and worshipers alike score the building's acoustics highly, expecially for singing. "It's one of those places that is rewarding for the singer and yet demanding at the same time," said Dr. Paul Torkelson '76, director of the Wartburg Choir. "It demands a great deal of accuracy to sing well there, but it also allows one to sing easily without pushing." Torkelson said the Wartburg Choir will present its concerts in the chapel. Dr. Karen Larson, college organist, has also organized a Chapel Choir of students, faculty, and staff that sings regularly at Sunday worship services.

Chapel revitalizes campus ministry programs

The new Wartburg chapel has revitalized worship and campus ministry activities on campus.

According to College Pastor Larry Trachte '66, the 250 bulletins printed for the first Sunday worship in the chapel weren't enough, and attendance has remained strong. He added that more than 100 students regularly participate in a Wednesday night eucharist service in the chapel, compared to 15 or 20 who attended a similar service in Danforth Chapel last year.

The main floor of the Wartburg Chapel, which seats about 200, is full for morning chapel services on Monday and Wednesday.

"With 200 people in Neumann Auditorium, the place seemed empty," Trachte noted.

"Pastor Trachte can finally see who's at worship," added Dana Scharnhorst '95 of Thornton, lowa, explaining that the Neumann Auditorium stage lights made it difficult for worship leaders to see the congregation. Scharnhorst, who is president of Wartburg's Campus Ministry Board, credits the chapel with revitalizing involvement in worship and boosting participation in outreach activities organized by the Campus Ministry Board. "It's not just the things that happen in the chapel, it's campuswide," she says. "I love it. It makes my job a lot easier."

Trachte and the Rev. Ramona Bouzard, director of church relations and associate in campus ministry, also are pleased with the renewed interest in Bible study. Last year, a Tuesday night Bible study drew eight to 10 regular participants. This year, 23 Bible study leaders meet with Trachte on Sunday nights and then organize their own study groups in the residence halls.

"I'd hoped we might have 10 or 12 leaders," he said.

Pastors and students agree that the chapel has made a big difference in this year's campus worship climate. "The challenge will be how to capitalize on this initial interest and enthusiasm," Trachte concluded.

Construction superintendent spends as much time on campus as most students

If time spent on campus counted for a college degree, Dean Snodgrass would soon be eligible for graduation.

Snodgrass, job superintendent for Cardinal Construction in Waterloo, Iowa, has spent the past two years supervising construction of the Wartburg Chapel. He'll be here for at least one more year overseeing construction of a classroom/technology center between the chapel and Luther Hall. Add that to projects he's supervised at Luther College, Ellsworth College, and Upper Iowa University, and he's probably met the residency requirements for a B.A.

"You have to do a lot of politicking," Snodgrass says of his job, which involves keeping the project on schedule as well as dealing with the client, the contractor and subcontractors, the architect, and the workers. He estimates that about 15 to 20 workers were involved with the chapel project. A Wartburg student, David Leonhart '96, also spent a summer perched on the chapel roof as he nailed concrete shingles in place. His father, Eugene Leonhart of Denver, Iowa, is president of Cardinal Construction.

Snodgrass says the chapel was a tough but rewarding job and credits "really good help." In 33 years with Cardinal Construction, this is the first time he's ever built a steeple on the ground, then hoisted it into place. He recalls the December day a year ago when the twin copper spires and base, weighing a total of 18 tons, were lifted by a crane.

"We had two new two-way radios to keep the workers on the tower in contact with the crane operator," Snodgrass said. "On the first lift, the radios quit." From then on, they relied on hand signals for the critical positioning.

Snodgrass, who lives in Cedar Falls, Iowa, admits that he'd rather be outside than doing all of the paperwork his job requires. His trailer, parked near Players Theatre and stocked with a refrigerator full of snacks and beverages for himself and the workers, has become a temporary campus landmark. When he abandoned his hard hat and work clothes for a suit and tie for the September chapel opening, his fellow workers issued a few whistles as he walked past, and they good-naturedly agreed that their supervisor, "cleans up pretty good."

INAUGURATION—Pastor Larry Trachte leads worship in Neumann Auditorium during the inauguration of President Robert Vogel in October 1980.

Worship moves around campus

President Robert Vogel alluded to the many worship locations on campus during his Opening Convocation address, citing "the decades of worship on this campus in libraries, lounges, classrooms, gymnasiums, and vast auditoriums."

In the days when convocation was required of all students, midweek worship was a regular part of the convocation schedule, recalls Erna Moehl, professor emerita of English, who joined the Wartburg faculty in 1947. The location changed as enrollment grew and the college built new facilities.

Convocations and chapel met in the assembly room of Luther Hall until the late 1940s. With the completion of Knights Gym, convo moved to the larger facility. In 1949, chapel services moved to the Little Theatre, formerly known as the Old Gymnasium, which had been renovated as an auditorium.

Until the early 1960s, when a student congregation was established on campus, students attended Sunday worship at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Waverly or at a church of their choice. The Chapel-Auditorium, later renamed for the late Dr. G.J. Neumann, opened in 1960 and was billed as a center of all campus religious, academic, and cultural activities. Convocations, Sunday worship, and some chapel services were held there.

As a student in the 1960s, the Rev. Larry Trachte recalls attending Sunday worship in Neumann Auditorium and chapel services in Neumann or the Student Union. When he returned to Wartburg as the college pastor in 1974, the worshiping community had dwindled, and convocation was no longer mandatory. Sunday services were often held in the Centennial Hall Lounge. Midweek chapel met in the choir rehearsal room of the old Liemohn Hall of Music or in the balcony of Neumann Auditorium.

Sunday worship eventually moved back to Neumann, and chapel met there on Monday and Wednesday and in the Student Union on Friday. When the Fine Arts Center opened, Trachte occasionally scheduled worship in Orchestra Hall, which is furnished with an organ and provides a brighter and smaller space than Neumann.

Fritschel composes work for chapel dedication

The dedication of the Wartburg Chapel featured the premiere performance of Lord Keep Us Steadfast, a work composed by Dr. James E. Fritschel '51 of Thousand Oaks, Calif. His brother, the Rev. Fred Fritschel '57 of Honolulu, Hawaii, provided textual assistance.

The Wartburg Choir, a double brass choir of 16 instrumentalists, and baritone soloist Jeffrey Snider, assistant professor of music, performed the commissioned work at three dedicatory services on Sunday, Oct. 30.

Fritschel said he started with the idea of a chorale tune and chose the familiar hymn, Lord Keep Us Steadfast in Your Word, because its text was written by Martin Luther.

"The idea of the tune permeates the piece, but it's never specific," says the former director of the Wartburg Choir, who recently retired from the California Lutheran University music faculty to devote more time to composing. Because a primary focus of the new chapel will be on preaching the Word, Fritschel incorporated Psalm 33, which deals with the Word, into the piece. His brother Fred, a hospice chaplain, provided a paraphrase of the psalm.

The work is divided into four parts: an introit; an unaccompanied anthem Fritschel calls hauptmusic or chief music; an offertory featuring a baritone solo; and a benediction that leads into singing of the hymn with choir, brass, and congregation.

While still a member of the Wartburg music faculty, Fritschel wrote In Thy Hand, a benediction based on a poem by the late Dr. G.J. Neumann '07, a longtime Wartburg English professor. It has become one of the choir's signature works.

Fritschel says computer software has made the technical aspects of composing easier, but notes that "it doesn't speed up the composing process itself." He says retirement has given him more time not only for composing, but also for racquetball, an activity he recommends to help clear the mind for creative endeavors.

Croghan earns his letter in coaching, teaching

▶ by Duane Schroeder

Larry Croghan, winner of the 1994 John Kurtt Alumni Coach-of-the-Year award, doesn't mind that he never was a standout athlete at Wartburg. Instead, he thinks it may be the reason he has been successful as a coach and teacher.

Croghan, who teaches U.S. history and is the head girls' basketball coach at Dubuque, Iowa, Senior High School, never won a varsity letter at the college. In fact, he was cut from the baseball team in his junior year.

"The fact that I wasn't able to make the grade as a college athlete never killed my desire or dream to be a part of athletics," he says. "Being a coach was a way I could make those dreams come true. Because I was never a gifted athlete, I had to learn how to play the game. This forced me to spend long hours practicing the techniques that others used to be successful as athletes.

"The long hours of practice taught me that teaching fundamentals and demanding the best out of someone could help overcome the lack of natural skills. The end result was it taught me to be a teacher, both in athletics and in the classroom."

A highly successful teacher, it might be added. Croghan started the girls' basketball program at Dubuque Senior in 1973 and since then has made five Iowa High School Girls' Basketball Tournament appearances. Last year, his squad finished as the state runner-up.

ALUMNI COACH OF YEAR—Larry Croghan '64 coached his Dubuque Senior High team to a second-place finish at the 1994 lowa High School Girls' Basketball Tournament. It was his fifth tournament appearance.

Notably, in the same month he received the Kurtt Coach-of-the-Year Award, he was cited by NEA Today, the publication of the National Education Association, as being an "outstanding teacher" as well as coach.

One of Croghan's teaching assignments is advanced placement U.S. history, a college prep course. At the end of the course, students who score well enough on a national test qualify for up to six hours of college credit in U.S. history. More than 80 percent of Croghan's students earn this credit. The national average is less than 60 percent.

"My interest in history was stimulated by the late Dr. Gerhard Ottersberg," Croghan says, recalling his classes with the former chair of the Wartburg history department. "His passion for history and his insistence on doing the best you can do in the classroom left a lasting impression on me. He always demanded the best from his students while giving the best he had. As a classroom teacher, I try to duplicate these characteristics. I only hope that I have come close to his high standards."

Croghan began his coaching career at Orient-Macksburg in 1964 and then coached at North Linn High School in Marion, Iowa, before moving to Dubuque. He has amassed an enviable total of 399 career wins.

His first contract amounted to $3,700 and required him to teach sociology, world geography, world history, American problems, American government, and psychology, while coaching baseball, football, girls' basketball, girls' track, and girls' softball. Today, he makes 10 times the money, has just one preparation in U.S. history, and coaches only one sport, but he has no regrets.

"Things were much different in 1964 than they are now," he says. "Then, there was a great demand for teachers. I was able to begin teaching and coaching right away. Because I wasn't an outstanding athlete or an honor student, I might not be given the chance to develop my skills as a coach or teacher in today's more competitive environment."

Croghan's formula for success as a teacher or coach emphasizes the student as a person. He says a coach or teacher must care about students as persons, treat each student fairly, explain the roles of the individual, have realistic expectations, and never expect someone else to give more than you are willing to give.

"Over the years, I have learned to adapt to the situations and the times," he concludes. "The adjustments have enabled me to get the most out of both my students and players."

Wartburg sends two sportscasters to the pros

Two heavyweights in the elite world of big-time sportscasting received citations from the Wartburg Alumni Association in October—Mark Holtz '67, the voice of the Texas Rangers for the past 12 years, and Don Hein '62, sports director at WTHR television in Indianapolis, Ind., where he spotlights the Indianapolis Colts as well as Indiana high school and college athletics. ▶ by Duane Schroeder

Broadcasting keeps Hein in the game

Don Hein, considered by many to be one of the best pure shooters in Wartburg basketball history, had a somewhat turbulent Wartburg career under the direction of then-coach Ax Bundgaard. He says one of his favorite interviewees is a coach of similar volatile character, Bobby Knight, head basketball coach at Indiana University.

"He makes me prepare for an interview better than any other coach," Hein says. "Knight doesn't answer stupid questions, and he and I have been 'media friendly' for more than a quarter of a century."

A sports information director from one of the Iowa Conference schools once dubbed Hein "Radar" after seeing his patented turn-around jump shot at the free-throw line. Hein was on the verge of becoming one of the first members of Wartburg's 1,000-point club when he transferred to State College of Iowa (now the University of Northern Iowa), where he played for Norm Stewart, now the head coach at two seasons with the Knights, leading them to one Iowa Conference title and a tie for second place.

Missouri. Hein scored 981 points in his School Boys' Basketball Tournament and was named to the Iowa All-State first team.

Today, he is featured on sports shows three times a day on NewsChannel 13. He also hosts two half-hour talk shows on the Indianapolis Colts professional football team and other Indianapolis sports. He has been named Sportscaster of the Year three times by United Press International and the Associated Press.

"... the biggest stars are the most cooperative. Those who think they are stars are usually the jerks."

Hein was also a standout player in football, basketball, and baseball at Waverly High School. He led the Go-Hawks to the finals of the Iowa High

He has won awards from the National Association of Racing Writers and Broadcasters (the Indy 500 and other races) and the Indiana State Football and Wrestling Coaches Associations. Prior to joining WTHR as sports director, he worked three years at WMBD-TV in Peoria, Ill.

Hein's fondest memories are his interviews with Joe DiMaggio, the New York Yankee great, and Kareem Abdullabbar, the standout basketball star with the Milwaukee Bucks and the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I remember asking DiMaggio, if it disturbed him that more people remembered him for selling coffee than playing baseball, and he said that he found something good about both situations. Abdul-Jabar was thought to be moody and approachable by many writers and sportscasters, but we talked several times, and he always listened carefully and gave a thoughtful answer. I always found that the biggest stars are the most cooperative. Those who think they are stars are usually the jerks."

Hein said DiMaggio and Abdul-Jabbar are the only "stars" he has asked for autographs.

Hein has done play-by-play in radio and television for high schools in Illinois and Indiana for the past 35 years. He also has covered the University of Iowa, Bradley University, the Indiana Pacers during their heyday, when they won all three of their American Basketball Association championships, and the Indianapolis

Yet Hein says the best part of his job is his "Something Extra Award." It features high school youngsters from central Indiana who make a difference in their school and have something to do with athletics. He usually features 25 youngsters each year and over the past 15 years has personally given $1,000 scholarships to the top student-athlete. He also is involved with the Indianapolis golf tournament for the city's Big Brothers and Big Sisters, raising more than $100,000 for that program.

Holtz rises from Cotta House to the big leagues

There never was any doubt about what Mark Holtz wanted to do when he got out of college. It was a long and circuitous route through Waverly, Scottsbluff, Neb., Peoria, Ill., Omaha, Neb., and Denver, Colo., but, "Now I'm living that rather long-shot dream I thought about while gazing out the Cotta House window at Wartburg."

Holtz's career started at KWAR-FM.

where he did play-by-play for the Wartburg football and basketball teams. Little did he realize that his talent eventually would land him one of the 28 major league play-by-play jobs.

Major league baseball has become a way of life for Holtz, who in normal years broadcasts 182 games from March to October, including 20 spring training games. He spends every March in Florida and just about every day in a ballpark. When baseball is over, Holtz's job is complete. He covers no other sports, taking the off-season totally off.

"Concentrating all my efforts on baseball makes me much more informed and radio-TV ready to cover my chosen sport," he says.

He is good enough to have been named Texas Play-by-Play Announcer seven times, given the Award of Excellence three times by the Press Club of Dallas, and presented a citation for Outstanding Achievement for Playby-Play by the United Press International. In 1990, he was named to the Texas Baseball Hall of Fame.

Holtz says one of the biggest rewards of his job has been the "rather spectacular moments I've covered in recent years"-moments such as the last two perfect games pitched in the American League by Mike Witt and Kenny Rogers and Nolan Ryan's sixth and seventh no-hitters, his 300th win, and his 5,000th strikeout.

Holtz has developed a special relationship with Ryan and notes, "My calls have accompanied his feats to the Hall of Fame, something I never considered while at the Cotta window." The two often do speaking engagements together.

"My calls have accompanied [Nolan Ryan's] feats to the Hall of Fame."

Not only does Holtz consider Ryan one of the greatest athletes ever, but he says Ryan also is one of the "finest family-oriented and caring individuals who has ever played the game. He's cut the generation gap and is terrific around kids."

The 1994 baseball strike put Holtz out of work earlier than usual, but he says the biggest damage was done to baseball's fan base. The Rangers, for example, were on track to draw 3.3 million in their new ballpark and perhaps make the playoffs for the first time ever.

Holtz thinks the owners are trying to establish a system to police themselves.

"In the past, good business practices have been thrown out the window for the 'we need one big player, and he's expensive' method of operation," Holtz says. "Self-restraint and trust are two factors owners have never come to grips with among themselves."

Arns proves you CAN go home again ▶ by Duane Schroeder

Even though he was an all-conference football and basketball player in high school, there never was any question about his future—he wanted to be a coach.

"Oh, when I was really young I wanted to be a professional player, like every kid," says Dave Arns '82, mathematics teacher and head football coach at Waverly-Shell Rock High School. "My dad had a tryout with the Philadelphia Eagles and made the final cut before he was let go. I realized that if dad couldn't do it, then maybe I should be a coach."

Arns, was a standout high school athlete. He quarterbacked the first Waverly-Shell Rock team to make the state football playoffs and was an all-conference basketball player on a team that went 19-1 and reached the substate in tournament play.

When he got to Wartburg, he went from being a star to a non-starter.

"I gained something from that," he says. "I learned to play a role on a team. Even though I was a non-starter, I still sat in on the quarterback meetings, and that was a learning process."

He spent the last two years of his college football career as a student coach for Canfield, along with Bob Nielson, now the Knights' head coach.

After graduating from Wartburg, Arns taught high school math and was an assistant sophomore football coach at Marion, Iowa. When a math teaching job opened up at Waverly-Shell Rock, he applied and got the job after going through an "uncomfortable interview." After all, he was returning home.

He coached sophomore football for two years before taking over as head varsity coach. Since then, he has led Waverly-Shell Rock to three Northeast Iowa Conference championships, two district titles, and two state championships, along with a string of six consecutive state playoff appearances. He has compiled a 68-25 record at W-SR after a 12-15 start in his first three years.

Returning home has not been a problem for Arns. In fact, he says, "It's neat. I can't think of a better high school at which to coach. If I can help young people in any way, I would just as soon help the young people of Waverly."

Arns initially thought he would give up football when the head basketball job opened up. It didn't work out that way. Instead, two years ago he took on both jobs and only gave up basketball this year, when he found the dual role exhausting.

"The first year I had both sports, the football team won the state championship, so we were a week behind in basketball. We had four football games in three weeks, plus my wife and I had our first child. Let me tell you, I was exhausted. That first year, I had no assistant in basketball, so I also had to run the junior varsity schedule, which made it even worse. In 1993, I was lucky enough to be a coach in the Shrine All-Star Football Game. That starts in July, so that added another month. The circumstances just made it tough."

Arns takes no credit for his coaching success.

"I didn't do it," he says. " We (including his assistants Dick Blau and

"If I can help young people in any way,
I would just as soon help the young

Bill Cook) created an atmosphere for the players to do it. We don't say we won two state football championships. We say we had two teams win them."

Arns graduated from Wartburg with a perfect 4.0 grade point average and a burning desire to be a teacher as well as coach. In fact, he says being a good teacher is much more important than being a good coach. One of his role models was his high school math teacher, Frank Flickinger '53, now retired.

Maintaining a perfect grade point average would be a natural for someone with Arns' pride.

"Why go into any class with the attitude, 'Well, I'll take a B in this class.' I'm rather proud of being a 4.0 student. There were times when I wished I had settled for a B, but this was a way of getting positive strokes. Nothing feels better than an A."

A WARTBURG FISH STORY

More than 50 years later, members of the Wartburg Class of 1943 are still talking about "the great piscatorial escapade"—the night they filled the Wartburg fountain with fish.

"It began on a warm night when the Cedar River was low," recalled Dr. Otto Senft of Longmont, Colo., semi-retired flight surgeon with United Airlines. "Just below the dam were what to us were millions of large carp, fish that could easily be caught by hand."

Word spread quickly on the Wartburg campus, and soon, students were on their way to the river with buckets and wash tubs. After a successful harvest, they had to find a place to keep the fish.

"Our goal was to keep them alive," said Senft, and soon it became apparent that only one place on campus could accommodate their quarry. As the fishermen assembled at the fountain, the women of Wartburg Hall watched from their windows, but could offer no help-it was after their curfew.

The next morning, a throng gathered at the fountain to admire about 25 large carp that had established residence there the night before.

"The dean of men, Professor Fritz, beheld the sight only to request all the men who had any part of the now famous piscatorial escapade to come to his office," said Senft. Fritz expected five or six students. Instead, he was besieged by a group of about 20 men, who elected Arnold Wuertz '44, now a retired pastor in Louisburg, Kan., as their spokesman.

"The ultimatum was to get those fish out of the fountain, because they were harassing the goldfish," said Senft. The late Charlie Pichelmeyer, a longtime Wartburg custodian, had reportedly been hitting the intruder fish with a large pipewrench, and students had captured his attempts at carp control on film.

"Stories were rampant at our 50-year reunion," Senft said. "But the one great event recalled by most was the piscatorial escapade."

Share your Wartburg tales

At every reunion, Wartburg alumni recall favorite stories from their college days. Now, you have the opportunity to share those tales with the entire Wartburg family through Wartburg Stories, a new feature that begins in this issue of the Wartburg Magazine. Stories should be about 300 words long and recall a memorable event or prank from your student days. Include your name, address, telephone number, and class year. We will select the best stories for publication, and we'll keep the others on file for possible future use. Send your entries by mail, FAX, or E-mail. Addresses and FAX number are listed on the Alumni Update form, page 29.

Alumni, faculty, staff, mourn death of 1985 grad

A 1985 Wartburg alumnus was killed Sept. 9 in what police called an attempted carjacking in a suburb of Washington, D.C.

Daniel K. Huston, 31, of Alexandria, Va., Wartburg's 1985 Outstanding Senior, an All-American runner, former student body vice president, and the college's first Homecoming king, died of multiple gunshot wounds. According to police reports, he and a companion, Heather MacDonald, had left a restaurant in Wheaton, Md., and were getting into Huston's Ford Explorer when the incident occurred.

Police said two men jumped into the back seat of the car as Huston was inserting the key into the ignition.

Almost immediately, the men opened fire, hitting both Huston and MacDonald several times. Huston reportedly ran from the vehicle but collapsed and died a few feet away. MacDonald survived the attack and is expected to recover from extensive injuries to her face and hands.

Police said a Montgomery County officer on routine surveillance witnessed the crime through binoculars from the top of a nearby parking garage, but she was unable to reach the couple before the shooting began. Shortly before Huston and MacDonald entered the parking lot, the officer had observed the assailants peering into cars and had called for additional police units. Patrol cars and a helicopter arrived at the scene shortly after the attack, and within an hour, police with dogs captured three men on foot, who were charged with first-degree murder, assault with intent to murder, and attempted armed carjacking. The search for a fourth suspect continues.

Huston graduated summa cum laude from Wartburg with majors in political science and philosophy. He went on to earn a law degree from Georgetown University in 1988 and since then had been associated with the Reid & Priest law firm in Washington, D.C.

"It's been said that violent crime is the price a culture pays for abandoning character and its cultivation," said Dan Thomas, professor of political science and one of Huston's mentors. "To the degree that this is so, it underscores a cruel and bitter irony in this tragedy: What made Dan Huston special, more than anything else, was his strength of character. Behind his many achievements, the loyalty he inspired among friends, and the respect he earned from co-workers was the breadth and the depth of his character."

At Wartburg, Huston competed in both track and cross country. He was a GTE Academic All-American in track and earned NCAA All-American honors by finishing third in the steeplechase at the Division III National Championships in 1985. He was also active in student government and sang in the Wartburg Choir.

"Dan was the consummate Division III athlete," recalled John Kurtt '53, who was his coach. "His wide area of involvement at Wartburg is what student-athletes should strive for. He was a joy to coach and a friend for life."

Jim Buchheim '85, Huston's former roommate and fellow runner, said his friend combined natural abilities with hard work and fierce determination.

"But his greatest attribute was his ability to balance his pursuit of individual goals with having a great time and making a special effort to have a positive impact on others," Buchheim said. "He was proud of his accomplishments and the recognition he received. He was prouder of things that didn't generate recognition—the friendships he had and the help and support he provided to others."

A native of Waverly, Dan was the youngest of Don and Carol Huston's seven children. His father is the retired editor of the Waverly Newspapers. His alumni siblings include Donald '78 and Joan Blumeyer '78 Huston of Clive, Iowa, and Denis Huston '82 of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Funeral services were held in Waverly on Sept. 13. Huston's colleagues and friends in Washington organized a memorial service at the Georgetown University chapel on Sept. 21.

A Daniel Huston Memorial Scholarship Fund has been established at the college. Contributions can be sent to the Wartburg Development Office, 222 Ninth St. N.W., P.O. Box 1003, Waverly, Iowa 50677-0903. 84 continued
